For some days past a government timber inspector has been in this vicinity, and to day in company with Billy Ritchie, started for the Huachuca mountains, to see if any one had been committing timber depredations on government land. A NARROW ESCAPE.

The Hostiles in the Owl Heads Mountains.

E. Goldbaum had a narrow escape yesterday; he left yesterday morning for Owl Heads to look after Joe Goldtree's mine: when about twenty-five miles from Tucson, and riding leisurely down a wash his horse gave a sudden jump and snort, he looked ahead of him and saw four Indians mounted riding along the ridge about 250 yards. Goldbaum wheeled his horse and dashed on the back trail, the Indians opened fire and pursued, and for nearly five miles the race for life was kept up, and until he came within two miles of Billito station when they gave up the chase. Goldbaum says that during the pursuit they fired at him five times. As to their being hostiles, he has not the least doubt. When he first saw them he was so close that he observed that they all had double belts of cartridges; all had guns and revolvers, one of them with an ivory handle; two of the Indians wore what appeared to be red flannel around their heads, another a red handkerchief, and the other a Mexican sombrero. Two wore white pants and white shirts, one blue overalls, the other black pants. Two of them rode sorrel horses, one of which was a big American horse fully fifteen hands high, one a black and the other was an iron gray horse. During their pursuit they were very close several times, as they tried to cut off Goldbaum's retreat, so close that he distinctly could recognize the colored border of the red handkerchief which one of them wore about his head. Goldbaum had no arms save a pistol, which he fired several times at his horse's feet to frighten him on.

There is little doubt but what the hostiles have for some days been in vesting the Owl Heads and Canyon del Oro; this is not the first time a band of from five to six have been seen, and their trail has been struck several times, but this is the first time they have been known to make an attack. There is little doubt but what this band is still in that vicinity. Mr. Goldbaum says he will head a party of men and take them to the trail of the herd. Who will go? is the question.—Tucson Star.

TUCSON TIPS.

The Paulshaw Case Said to be Compromised.

A correspondent of THE TOMBSTONE writes from the a. and h. pueblo as follows:

Tucson, June 14, 1886.

EDITOR TOMBSTONE—The projected narrow gauge railroad, which will connect Tucson with Globe, has begun the laying of its track, which is already far beyond the natural and intended whistling post. The rolling stock is expected to arrive in a few days from the East, when tracklaying will be vigorously pushed and the new building for the insane, recently erected at Phenix, will no doubt be overcrowded with overjoyed enthusiasts, for which this city is so justly famous.

The steamboat line between this city and Calabasas is not yet completed. Eastern capitalists have expressed grave doubts about the feasibility of navigating the Santa Cruz with high pressure vessels. However, the difficulty may yet be overcome and the wharves at Tucson be crowded with Arizona productions and thousands of passengers.

Dame rumor hath it that the differences between Messrs. Paul and Shaw have been amicably adjusted by Paul withdrawing the appeal and printing and filing of briefs and paying all charges and costs of court. On the first day of July he will to fully take his official farewell of the Sheriff's office and turn the same over to Mr. Shaw. Nothing definite has been ascertained as to the cause which affected the compromise, but it is the universal belief that Mr. Paul manfully surrenders to the dictates of conscience and regains a half lost opportunity for a sheriffship in heaven.

The Chinese are as thick here as mosquitoes in a Mississippi valley bottom. Daily the almondeyed John may be seen clad in a pair of sixteen inch wide overalls, basking in the gentle rays of the sunlight, selling verdure, or else perhaps his winning smile in a well kept restaurant may cause a sacrifice of four last two-bit piece. Here in Tucson he can pump himself full of opium or worship the idolatrous Confucius in unalloyed joy, unnoticed and undisturbed. May the good work go on and his tail continue to grow with his wisdom until the weight behind will control the object before in his eagerness for wealth in the ruinous race to prosperity.

Items for Stockmen.

Cattle naturally select a certain place in a water-course to drink at, where the bank is not precipitous. During a good part of the year this bank is muddy, on account of its moisture and tramping of the animal. As a result, the horses get scratches, the cows come to the milking pens with muddy udders, and frequently animals are injured by the crowding in the mud. Hogs are often seriously injured, because the mud becomes so deep and tough, that they are well nigh helpless in it. Another objection is that the animals wade to the middle of the creek, and soon make it bottom as muddy as the bank, and the water becomes unfit for drinking. A convenient and inexpensive arrangement, which may be built of heavy plank, brick or flat, prevents all this. It is constructed by first making an incline on a level platform for the animals to stand on while drinking. This plane terminates in an abrupt descent, forming a trough for the water to flow through. The trough should not be more than two feet wide, that the animals may easily get across it. The level floor permits the animals to drink at their ease; often a matter of importance. Such a drinking place should be made at the upper end of the creek, where it passes through a held to prevent the animals from soiling the water by standing in it above where they drink.—American Agriculturist for May.

Rescue Hose Meeting.

There will be a meeting of Rescue Hose Company, this evening at 8 o'clock. All members are requested to be present. C. N. THOMAS, Secretary.

Women.

They called her Lady Washington. Will they call Frankie, Lady Cleveland?

N. P. Willis's daughter, Lillian, is literary in her tastes, and inherits much of her father's talent.

Miss Cleveland wishes young Mrs. Grover, much joy of Washington. The capital was never to her taste.

Mrs. Delia Parnell talk of revisiting the green old sod, and of giving her blessing to the cause which lies nearest her heart.

Washington ladies are just dying to get a glimpse of Frankie's Parisian dresses; and their eyes will be gratified in due season.

Every bachelor who purchases a $50 suit of clothes in a store at Homingford, Neb., gets a wife. But the tailor won't take back old clothes.

Miss Mary Anderson is to be painted by Alma Tadema as Salambo at the Barbarian feast. Mary can make a very fine sabam when she sets her mind to it.

The Indian Rendezvous.

On Friday some of the settlers on the San Pedro river saw thirty armed Apaches, who were supposed to be hostiles. They had committed no recent depredations, and it is believed they were awaiting new supplies of ammunition. There is no doubt in our mind that the almost impenetrable Gallura mountains give protection and shelter to recuperating and recruiting bands of Indians, and that they have some arrangement with allies in that neighborhood to obtain supplies of ammunition and arms. The neighborhood has become a lurking place of the savages, and from every direction it has been a point of general rendezvous for the separate bands. With a characteristic subtle cunning they approach their asylum by circuitous and difficult routes, often wading up the small mountain streams for long distances to obliterate their trail. Why should they select this point, as a rendezvous upon journey apparently without a motive, unless it is to supply themselves with cartridges? They were not forced upon this long journey from Sonora. It was a voluntary action upon their part, and their economy of action upon their northward journey and prodigality in returning may be assumed as almost conclusive evidence that their empty belts have been replenished.

There is yet an unrecorded chapter in this campaign of the most sensational nature, and we firmly believe that the thirty armed Apaches seen last Friday on the San Pedro will figure as prominent characters in it.—Citizen.

Men.

The Rev. Dr. Sunderland received a handsome fee, but Colonel Lamont's fee can not be paid in money.

Mr. Parnell employs two sets of secretaries, one set to free Ireland during the day, another to keep the watch fires lighted at night.

Hannibal General Anson G. McCook, secretary of the United States Senate, has married a namesake; but it is for better, not for worse.

The name of Buddenstock now passes from the kerosene-lighted brightness of unenviable notoriety to the cavernous gloom of buried oblivion.

The Emperor of China imperiously declined to chew fine-cut. No barbarian chopped-up tobacco for him. Give him opium, or give him a chop-sick.

M. Rochefort would find favor among the chivalry of Gotham if he were to come over and lecture upon how to fight a duel without drawing blood.

Grammar and Pie.

Little Tommy—Can I eat another piece of pie?

Mamma (who is something of a purist)—I suppose you can.

Tommy—Well, may I?

Mamma—No, dear, you may not.

Tommy—Then grammar, anyway!—Rambler.
